Not illustrated. 1919 Excerpt: .a thorough investigation and classification of the acreage of the public domain is imperatively demanded. The Land Office shall also call upon the United States Geological Survey for all information as to the value and classification of lands. In the act creating the Geological Survey, as already stated, Congress provided that it should have charge of the classifi to convey sufficiently accurate information for the general guidance of the officers who execute the sales. The law also provides a method of proof as to the character of lands, which forms an indispensable stage in the process of sale. Any transaction as to a piece of public land may be challenged before the proper officers, and its character may be determined by competent proof. The present method of sale of the public lands depends, therefore, chiefly upon a rule of law rather than the classification of experts in advance of the procedure of sale. First Annual Report of the Geological Survey, 1880, p. 5. cation of the public lands. In the same act, however, provision was made for the creation of a commission of five members, of whom the Director of the Geological Survey was to be one, to report to Congress first, a codification of the present laws relating to the survey and disposition of the public domain; second, a system and standard of classification of public lands, as arable, irrigable, timber, pasturage, swamp, coal, mineral lands, and such other classes as may be deemed proper,...
